This new development has unbounded possibilities for good and evil

Harmony is pure love, for love is complete agreement.

It is easy in the world to live after the world's opinion;
it is easy in solitude to live after our own;
but the great man is he who in the midst of the crowd keeps with perfect sweetness the independence of solitude.

Ralph Waldo Emerson

HOTEL

Before the beginning of years
There came to the making of man
Time, with a gift of tears;
Grief, with a glass that ran;
Pleasure, with pain for leaven;
Summer, with flowers that fell;
Remembrance fallen from heaven,
And madness risen from hell;
Strength without hands to smite;
Love that endures for a breath;
Night, the shadow of light,
And life, the shadow of death.

Algernon Swinburne

O eyes, no eyes, but fountains fraught with tears;
O life, no life, but lively form of death;
O world, no world, but mass of public wrongs,
Confused and filled with murder and misdeeds.

Thomas Kyd

"Conflicts of interest between man and man are resolved, in principle, by the recourse to violence. It is the same in the animal kingdom, from which man can not claim exclusion; nevertheless men are also prone to conflicts of opinion, touching on occasion, the loftiest peaks of abstract thought, which seem to call for settlement by quite another method."

football

Football has always been an important factor at Loyola. Win or lose, the teams have always given everything. This year's team is no exception. It fought in every game until the final gun, and habitually came back the following week with every bit of courage, desire, and strength possible.

Inexperience and lack of knowledge hindered the freshmen once again. Having fought hard all year, they show great promise for the future.

All who watched the 1970-71 basketball team were witness to thrilling action as Loyola plowed through one of the toughest schedules in the C.I.F. to emerge second place in the league with a record of 19 and 7.

In a successful pre-season, the team captured the championship in the Murphy Tournament, as well as a consolation in the Pacific Shores tourney. The Cubs came on strong in league competition, chalking up an excellent 8-2 record, winning every game in the second half of the season and earning a berth in C.I.F. playoffs.

Loyola, clashing with Ventura in the first round of C.I.F. competition, rose to the occasion with a 75-72 victory. However, on the following Tuesday, the Big Blue machine succumbed to the relentless Falcons of Crescenta Valley, losing 80-63 to the tallest team in the CIF.

Although denied the Championship Trophy, the team did not retire without important victories, both from individual and team efforts. Leading a dedicated, hardworking squad was team captain, playmaker, leading scorer and defensive man Chris Cowie, considered by many the best guard in the C.I.F. Delivering Loyola's rebounding and scoring punch were two big seniors, center Tom Rogers and forward Bob Heinen. The two best surprises of the year were forward Steve Kristovich and Junior guard Rick Denault. Steve's tough defense and Rick's keen shooting ability were instrumental to the team's succes..

1970-71 was also a great season for Coach Bill Sanchez, who directed the club through a hard-fought year. He, along with the starters, the excellent substitutes Bill Brown, Jim Horimoto, junior Tom McAndrews, and the other members of the team would agree that this was indeed a very good year.

Despite the fact that there were but two returning lettermen, and a new coach at the helm, this year's Varsity thinclads were able to post a winning season, beat Cathedral for the first time in four years, and take second place in the Del Rey League. This was, in no small way, due to the tremendous efforts of Coach Charles Valenti and those of his undying wit.

The nucleus of the squad, Oscar Barreda and Jay Jackson, was reinforced by seniors Jim Raftery and Albert C De Baca; juniors Don Banks and Joe Solano; and sophomores Augie Duran, Bob Beggs, and Greg Valenti. These spirited Cubs were in the thick of the pennant race when injuries and a loss to a highly favored Salesian squad took them out of contention for the league crown.

Following in the footsteps of the Varsity, this year's JV team also boasted a winning effort, and showed great promise for the future. Led by freshmen Andy Holquin and Chris Radnich, this valiant squad of freshmen and sophomores challenged veteran teams and promised to return next year—older and wiser.

Tri-captains Barreda, Jackson, and Raftery received special awards for the season: Barreda, M. V. R.; Jackson, Most Inspirational; and Raftery, Outstanding achievement at league finals.

Loyola's 1971 Tennis team again proved to be one of great strength; easily capturing the Del Rey League crown, it nonchalantly stretched Loyola's league winning streak to 29.

The team's five singles positions were held by co-captains Bob Neary and Thad Howard, junior Don LeSage, soph Rick Grant, and freshman Pat Harrington. Rounding out the squad were the doubles teams of Frank Muscara/Eric Moore, and Charley Thomas/Peter Nelson.

This year's team was again fortunate to be under the direction of ex.-U.S.C. tennis star Mr. Andre Affatato.

The 1971 Loyola High Golf team proved to be the best in recent years. With all but one member of last year's Del Rey League Champions returning, the Cub linkers drove, chipped and putted through their schedule with impressive victories. Outstanding this year were seniors Mark Anderson, Jim Cromie, Charlie Horan, Pat Kelly, and Mike Piraino. Also, junior veterans Scott Simms and Brian Lungren, with the experienced coaching of Fr. Griffin, S.J., make the outlook for the future promising.

Loyola's Swim team (1971 edition) again performed successfully in the swimming lanes. One of the season's triumphs included a victory over Harvard, the first in four years. Paced by school record-holders Jim Jeffs and Guy Stone, the team overcame a poor preseason start and distinguished itself in league competition. Captain Sean Burke, junior Tim Musselman, and freshman Mark Boensel helped to complete the powerful edge which the varsity enjoyed in freestyle, butterfly, and breaststroke in all distances.

Former Olympic swimmer Sandy Gillcrest coached the team for the second year, guiding it to a successful year and preparing the individual swimmers for the opportunity to compete in the C.I.F. trials at the end of the season.

Outstanding members of the J.V. squad included Craig Meyer, John Crawford, Rich Finfrock, and Dave Gibney. Freshmen Rich Malvaez and Joe McCroskey led the C team.

Ralph Ongkeko

With prospects for a continuation of an already successful soccer program at Loyola, the team opened their fourth season with hopes for a playoff berth. A tough pre-season schedule saw the Cubs meet six of the ten top-ranked teams in the C.I.F. With only three returning lettermen, the team hoped to gain enough experience and emerge as a unit going into league competition, which boasted the second through fourth-ranked teams.

Injuries throughout the season prevented the Cubs from realizing their full potential. Seniors Leslie Thornhill, Albert C De Baca, and Pat Casey led a stingy, but inconsistent defense, allowing only an average of three goals a game. Halfbacks Rich Kelly, Luigi Losorelli, and Richard Banda, all juniors, gained playing experience. Goalie Tim Kamerer turned in shutouts against third-ranked South High and Pius X.

The forward line, lacking cohesion and some luck, could not produce when it had to. Ralph Ongkeko, team captain and all-league prospect, Clive Grimbleby, and Jeff Licuanan waited for the last three league games to develop.

Coach Dennis Checkett, a winning coach at Cal State Fullerton, commented that the season was a slight success in terms of experience for next year.

Baseball, a sport which enjoys great popularity in the eyes of the sports world today, oddly enough receives little attention within the realm of Loyola High School. The baseball games seem to go unnoticed, except by a few interested students and parents. This indifference on the part of the student body causes an increase in self-pride, rather than school pride, in each of the ball players. From this, we achieve a team of individuals, each contributing in his own special way to create a closely knit group of men working together to accomplish a variety of goals.

The team is led by captains Bob Kahle and John Pavacik, occupying left field and second base, respectively. These two make up the strength of the batting order, and are primarily the backbone of the team. Rounding off the outfield are John Minervini and lead-off batter Joe Collins.

Coach William Carroll

Pat Breen at first base, Tim Wheeler at shortstop, and Mark Pietralunga at third complete the well-balanced infield. Catching is handled by Shawn Bennett and multi-purpose Paul Workman. Jack Yelaca handles this year's pitching assignments.

With the departure of Coach Mario DiMuro, the team is now under the able leadership of Santa Clara great, Bill Carroll, who has contributed a great deal of time and experience to the team.

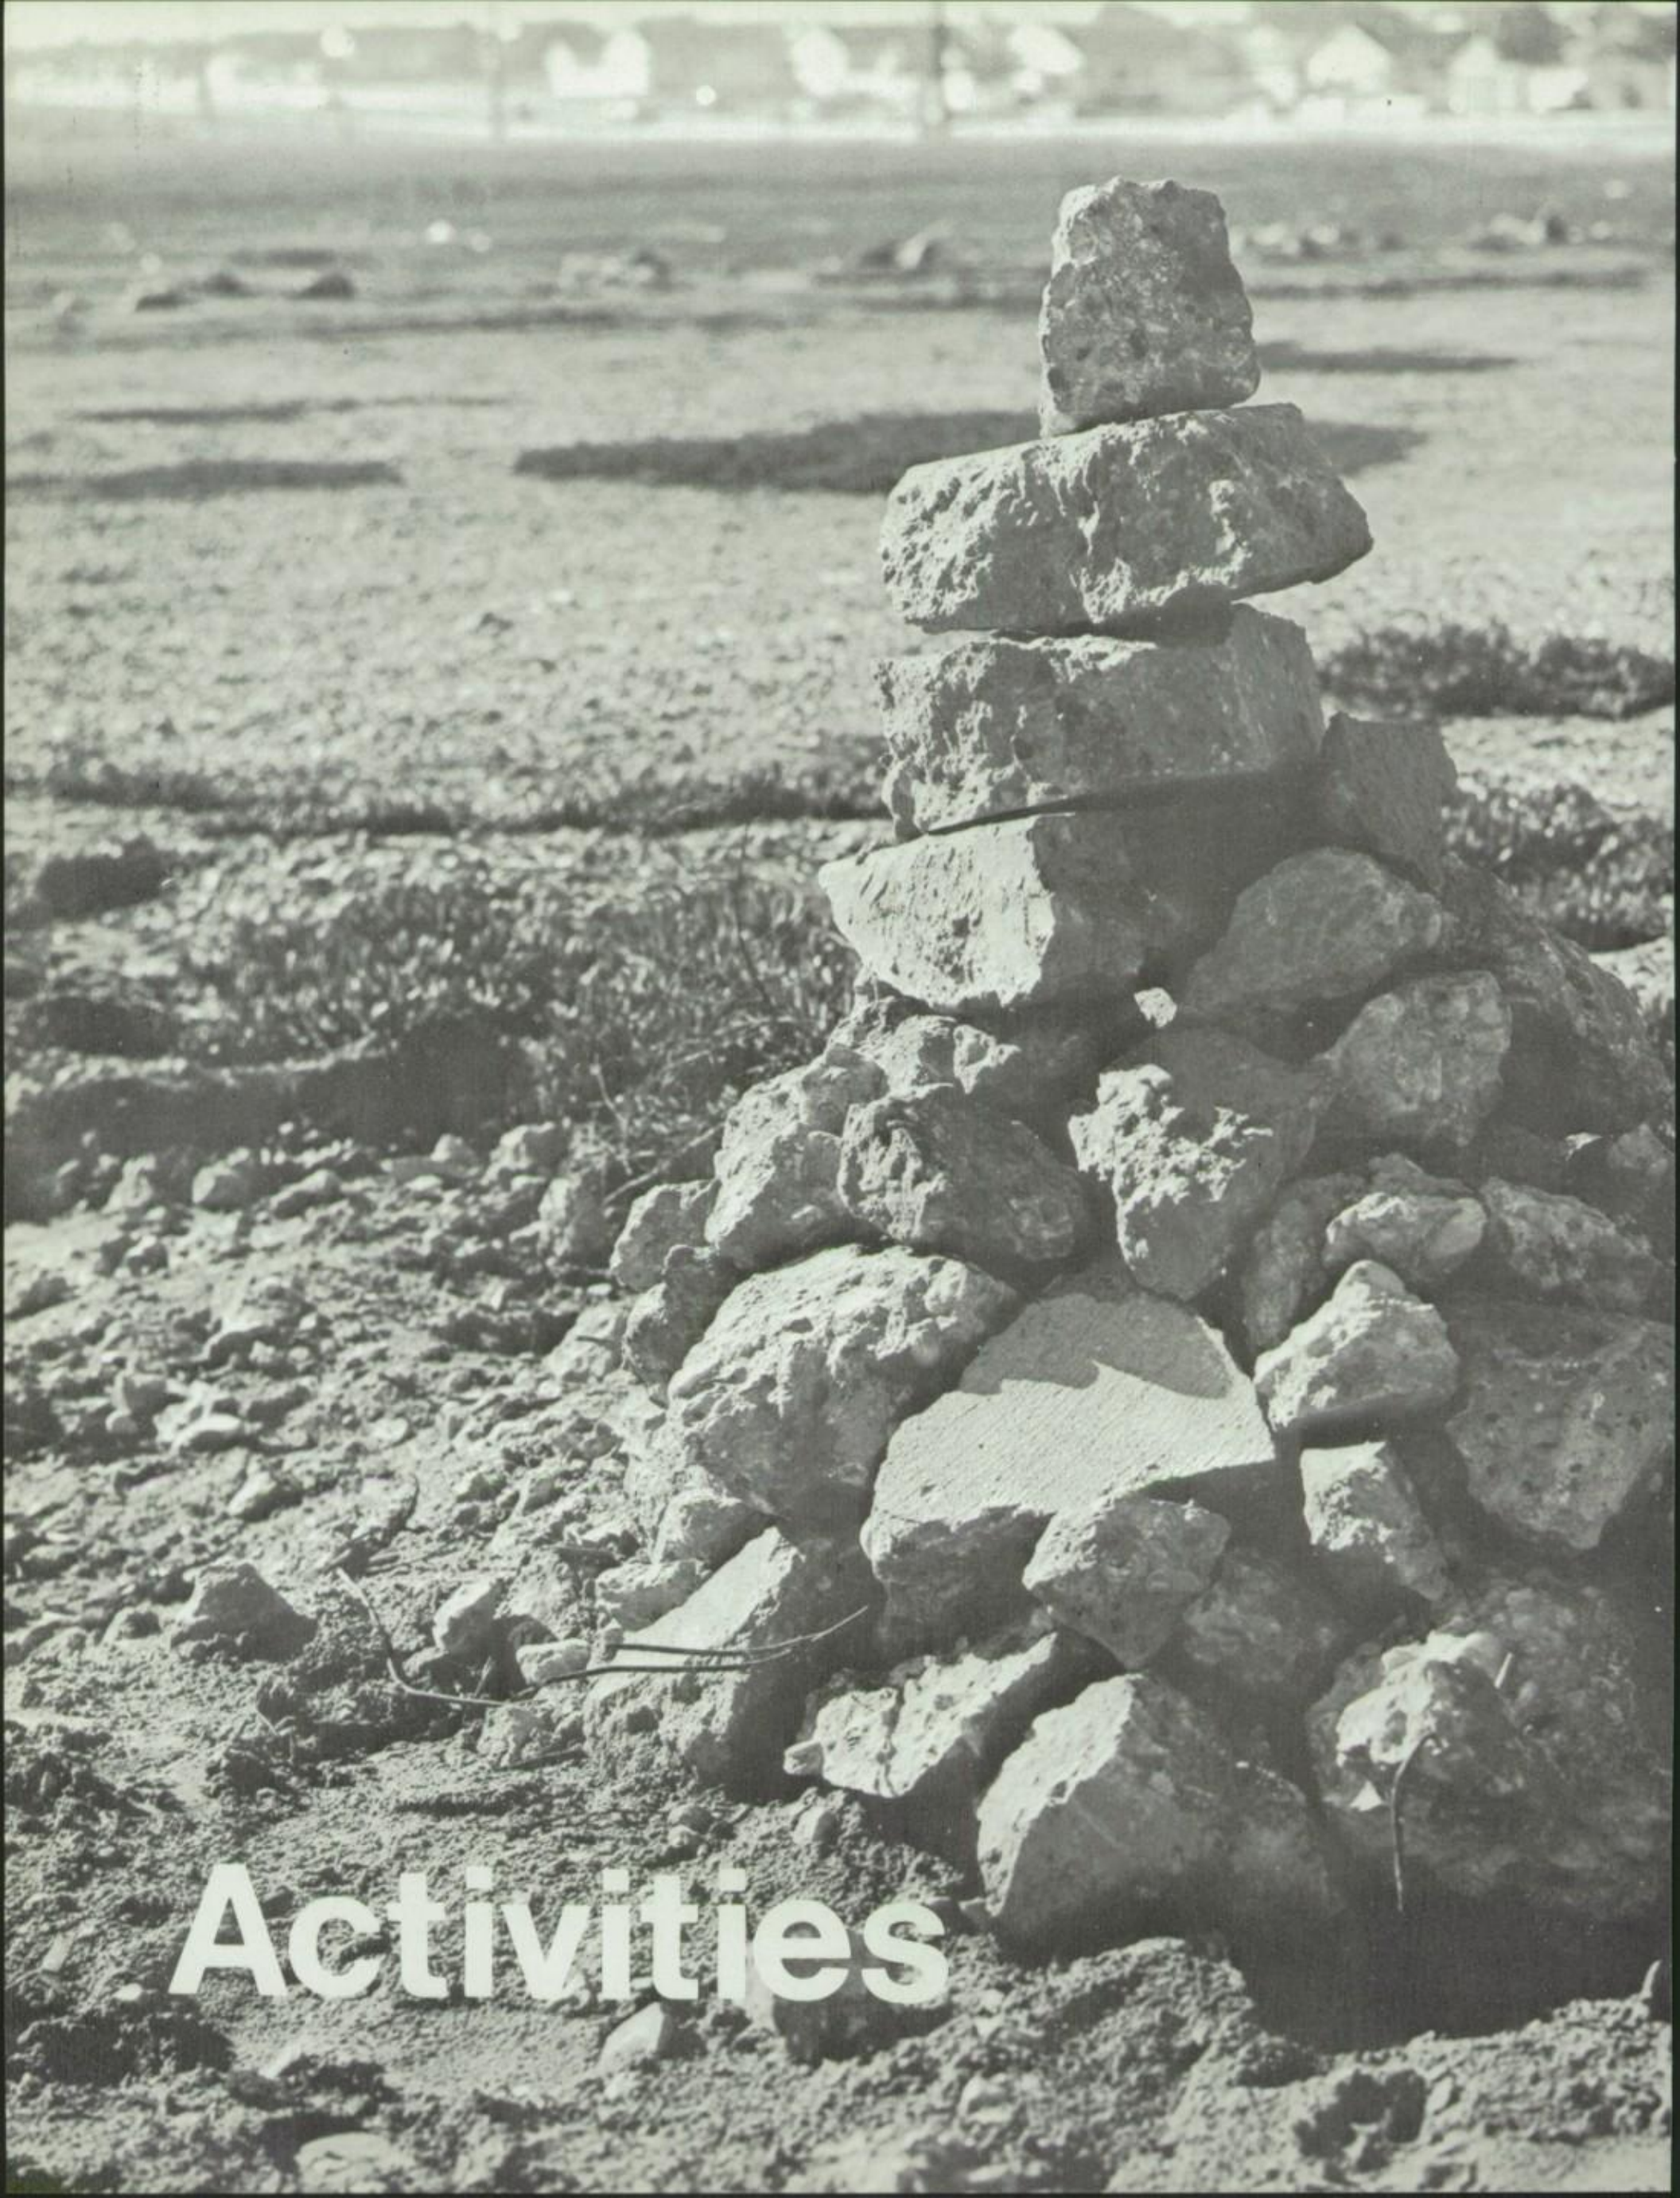
Once again an exciting intramural program appeared on the Loyola campus. Emanating from the homerooms, the Loyolans, infused with talent and vigor, sought the competitiveness that was so characteristic of this year's program. The program consisted of football, basketball, and softball, along with 2-man volleyball and 3-man basketball tournaments. Under the guidance of Intramural Commissioner Bob Kahle, the intramurals succeeded in a very special way. Although other programs could have compared in ability and the level of organization, none could have matched the amount of fun, enjoyment, and excitement that was had.



Activities

"Brotherhood is not just a Bible word. Out of comradeship can come and will come the happy life for all. The underdog can and will lick his weight in the wildcats of the world."

Heywood Broun

After a somewhat slow start, Loyola High's student council of 1970-71 began a series of new and exciting ideas and projects. The council didn't engage in these various endeavors merely because they were new or would attract attention. The council sincerely felt each of these proposals satisfied a real need or purpose.

The main theme of the council this year probably was centered around involvement. Every proposal tried to get the student to some way participate. Through this involvement each student could feel he was more a part of Loyola and strive for his personal betterment and the betterment of the school. Along these lines, the most significant programs were the Constitutional revision and the addition of a Student's Bill of Rights. These tried to make Loyola's government more real, more easily contactable by each student. The Bill of Rights in particular stressed the importance of the efforts of the individual and the power and capabilities of all the students—not just a handful of seniors.

student council

Other innovations also emphasized individual participation—that each student plays an important role at Loyola. His ideas are as good and valid as anyone else's, and his work, his involvement is essential for the more complete development of the entire student body.

The result of this theme or trend of thought was a stimulation for many students to get involved. Class reports and meetings began occuring. Newspapers and polls outside of those sponsored by the school developed. More clubs, more projects and more enthusiasm in general became evident. The long search for that mysterious spirit has started to end. People have started growing closer to each other, Loyola grew stronger and more open to ideas and courses of action.

Thus because of this growth of involvement of more people, because of this continued recognition by the students that they each play a vital role in Loyola and because of the continued spirit of doing things together and the spirit of brotherhood—this year's work must, in a very real sense, be called successful.

The Pep Club's principal function is to generate and maintain school spirit at Loyola. This important task is done through the tedious jobs of sign-painting, skit-writing, and publicity stunts. The creative signs were painted by dedicated students interested in keeping Loyola's spirit "number one." This sign committee was headed by Steve Sharon and Paul Girard. The rally committee, under the direction of Charles Horan, spread the spirit throughout the student body. Jay Jackson presided over the publicity committee, which also spread school spirit and raised funds by the selling of spirit buttons and the ever-popular kazoos. These three commitees were united and "spirited" into action by the president of the Pep Club, Pat Breen, with the assistance of Mr. Theodore B. Finsterbach, S.J., moderator.

Mr. Albert King

The Dance Committee, while possessing great expectations for this year's social functions, was met with moderate excitement, moderate participation, and, ultimately, moderate success. The first dance, as in previous years, enjoyed prosperity, both socially and financially. However, the lack of interest at the first concert, which featured Albert King, proved to be a hindrance to future efforts of the committee in providing the quality of entertainment Loyola students were looking forward to. But, due to the zealous efforts of the Dance Committee, the incurred deficit was erased with the success of the Christmas Dance. Bands such as Fanny, Red Wilder Blue, and Jamme were eagerly accepted by many students, and plans for the concert-type music to be presented during the Spring Festival were also applauded. Rightfully, the practicality of bigger and more expensive social functions were questioned throughout the year, and the hopes of the Student Body Treasurer, with regards to band, were deterred.

Appreciation is extended to John Ashkar, Greg Melanson, Mike Locascio, John Minervini, John Poxon, Phil Stathatos, Tom Halligan, and Craig Meyer, whose efforts made this year's concerts and dances possible.

This year the Loyalist has experimented with a new printing process, in which the majority of the printing and layout is done by the staff themselves. The hectic organization this process requires raised doubts as to the value of the new system, but the excellent results have solved any questions raised.

Jon Fuller, as Editor-in-Chief, masterminded the operation with professional aplomb, and it is due to him that the Loyalist continued its tradition as a forum for intelligent thought and well-expressed opinion.

Mr. Gordon Bennett, S.J. , served as moderator, adviser, and arbiter.

For more than three hundred years the Jesuits have been innovators with regard to theater arts. This tradition has carried over to the present day in the form of the Drama Club.

The hilarious spoof, The Mouse that Roared, was directed by Mr. Paul Hanley, S.J.

The function of the Drama Club is to acquaint students with the highly expressive medium of dramatic arts; putting on the masks of another person and seeing the world through his eyes.

More than 150 students were involved in acting and non-acting roles this year. Supervising the students' creative efforts were president, Tony Brazil, and vice-president, C. J. Maguire.

The classical musical, The Music Man, was directed by Mr. Paul Hanley, S. J., assisted by the music director, Mr. Gordon Bennett, S. J.

In troubled, rhetoric filled times such as these, the knowledge and ability of speech is a precious commodity. As Adolph Hitler once said, great happenings are caused by orators, not necessarily writers. On the Speech Team, members learn how to write and deliver their own orations, or interpret and analyze others. In Debate, teams research in depth and argue pressing issues of our times such as pollution or foreign policy. Greg Erlandson is president of '71's illustrious team with Mike Smith, Vice-President. Bruce McBirney and Mark Ciccone are Secretaries, while our top teams are Mark Schallert and Mike Newman, and Mike Smith and Mark Brown.

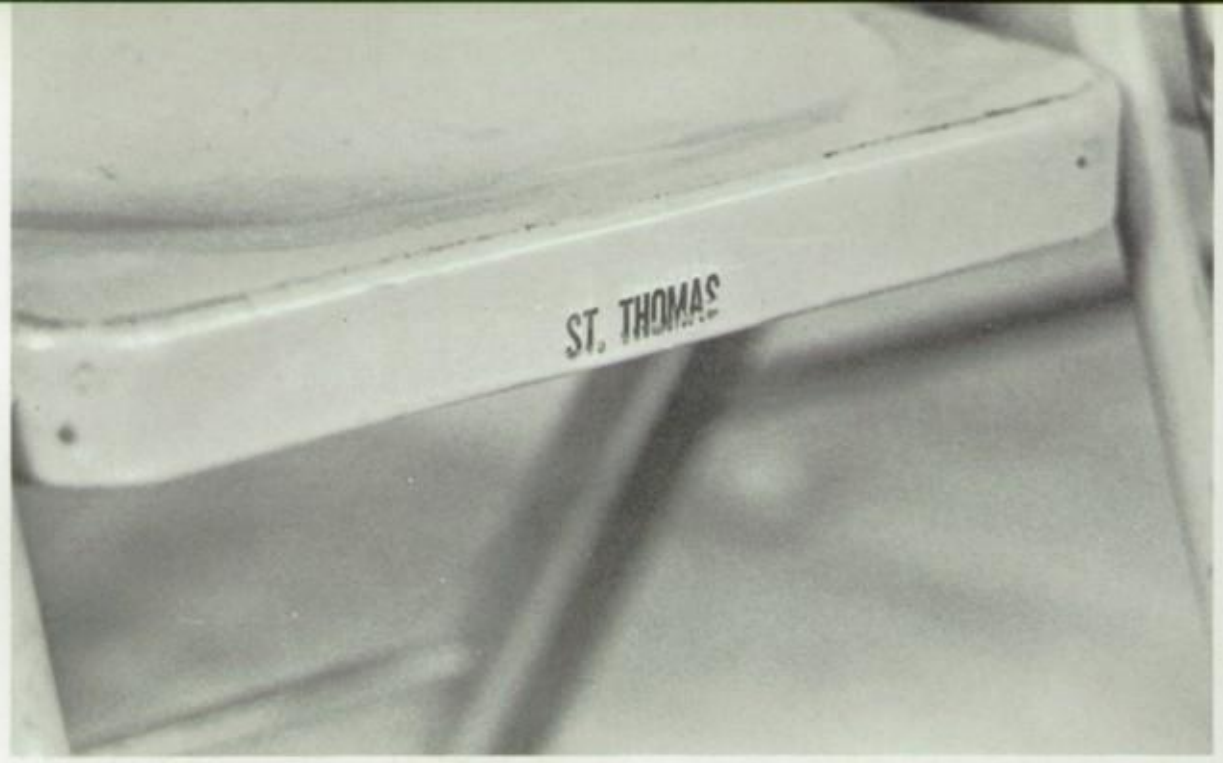
The Christian Action Movement has sought to serve as a functional outlet for the constructive energies of the Loyola student body. While Loyola, the institution, strove for excellence in the academic quests of the classroom, CAM emphasized the dynamic aspects of Christian living, stressing the individual student's relation to Loyola, his community, and his world. Above all, CAM was in no sense a rigid organization, it reflected the myriad of interests and desires of its members.

In practical terms, these interests took shape in numerous CAM co-ordinated community projects. The children's orphanage of Tecate, the Hollywood-

Sunset Free Clinic, and the House of Hospitality all benefited from the volunteer task forces of Loyola. CAM tutors aided children of the local elementary school, St. Thomas, and also offered their help to students of Drew Junior High. In the area of race relations, CAM sponsored a continuous black-white dialogue with students from Centennial High. And throughout the year, senior citizens in old folks' homes were comforted in their lonely hours by the music and conversation of our students.

Fr. James Rude, moderator, provided this year's CAM group with an unfaultering source of inspiration.



"Nonviolence is the answer to the crucial political and moral questions of our time; the need for man to overcome oppression and violence without resorting to oppression and violence.

"Man must evolve for all human conflict a method which rejects revenge, aggression and retaliation. The foundation of such a method is love."

clc

The Christian Life Community is an attempt to awaken the spirit of true Christianity within its member, and to carry this spirit to their vocations in the secular world.

The CLC was founded for the benefit of mature Catholics in the temporal world. As such, it was not originally meant to include adolescents. It was felt, however, that students have an equal need for an opportunity to strive for a more complete understanding of their Christian commitment. At Loyola, CLC endeavors are, of necessity, geared to the future commitments of its members, as well as to the role that students play at present.

In order to form an atmosphere of intimacy among its members, CLC divides itself into a number of small groups. These are coordinated by Fathers Rude, Koch, Leonard and Mr. Donahue; they act in loose affiliation within the basic structure as stated in the national constitution. The groups employ various types of activity, such as spiritual retreats, discussions, and concerted Christian action in order to realize a greater sense of awareness, sensitivity, and true apostolic spirit.

From its humble beginnings, the Junior Classical League of Loyola has evolved into one of the most functional, student-oriented clubs on campus. The primary goal being to further the values found in Classical customs and literature, the JCL achieves this end through its many social activities during the year. Along these lines, we have three outings in conjunction with our sister chapter at Immaculate Heart High School. These are held to celebrate the Ludi Plebeii, the games of the common people; Saturnalia, the feast of Saturn, God of the Harvest; Ludi Romani, the game of the Romans.

The hierarchy of our organization consists of a most venerable moderator, James Rude, S.J.; CJCL Treasurer, Philip Raycraft; Loyola Chapter President, Douglas Herbert and Vice-President, Marcus Ciccone.

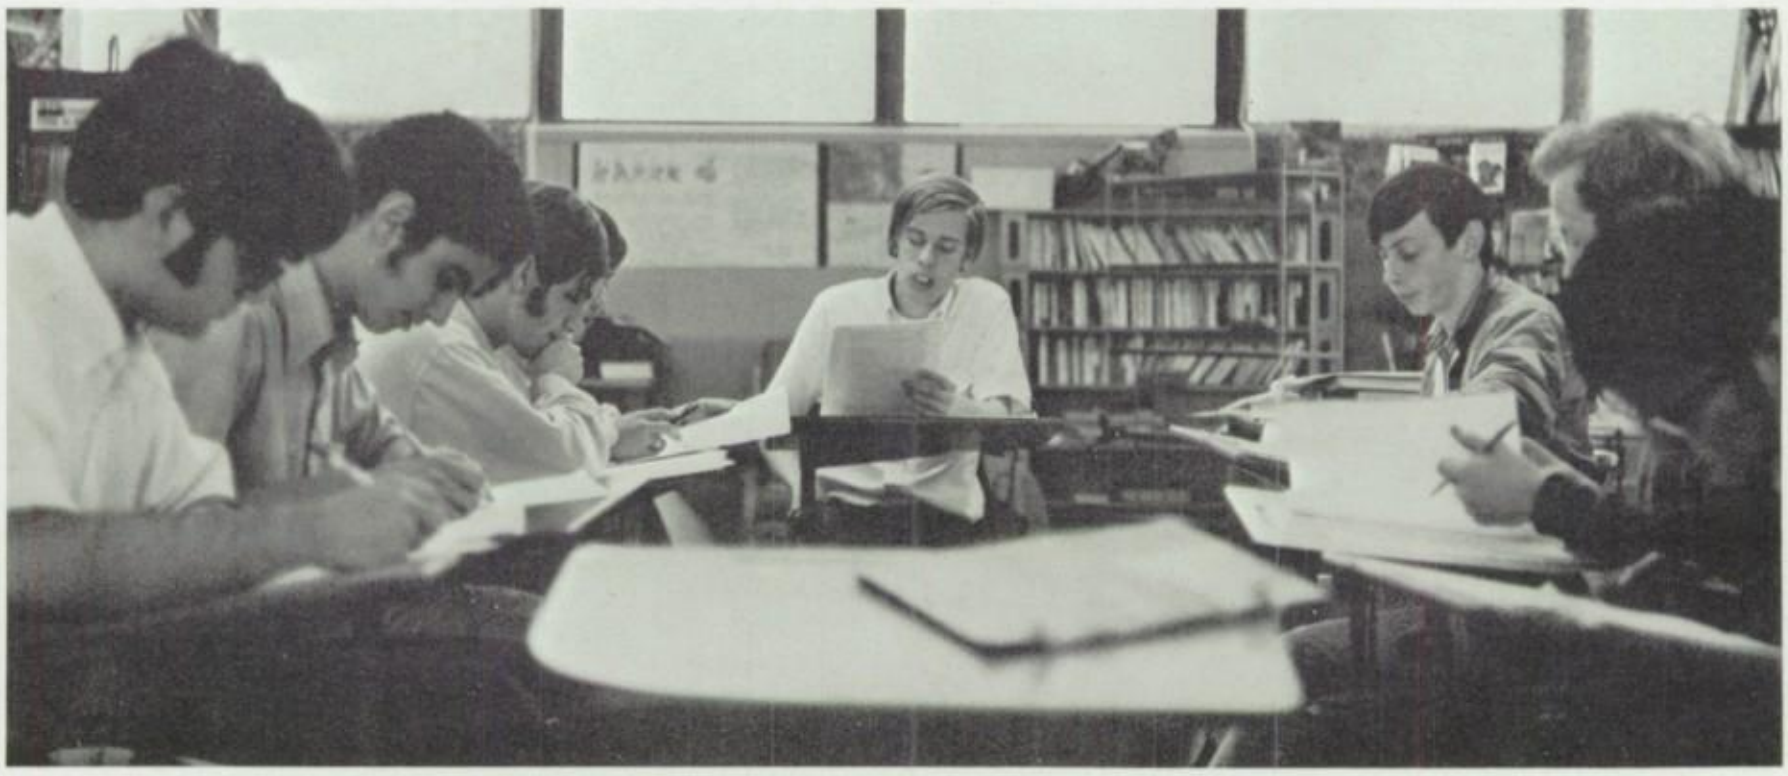
A windowpane is used for reflecting; one views the rest of life and wonders how it touches his "little corner." In the Literary Review this year, moderated by Mr. Looney, Windowpanes becomes a glass through which one is able to see outside himself.

Students found it fit to write about themselves and their role towards others. Now, we see the windowpane turning into a looking glass, with which we find that we've been seeing ourselves the whole time.



The Monogram Club acts as Loyola High School's Service Club. Throughout the year its members can be found ushering at all important school events and athletic contests. The members also handle many facets of parent-teacher nights, as well as showing visiting prospective freshmen the Loyola campus. Bob Grattan is this year's president and the club is moderated by Fr. Gerald T. Wade, S.J.

Cliché to the right of me- Cliché to the left of me. What to do? - Where to go?

Well, it's somewhat odd, but certainly an experience in living. After four years one is prepared for any college dormitory, or so they like one to think. Many people don't think of it as a second home, but it certainly is. The freshmen are confused and picked on; the sophomores are glad they'll never be "frosh" again; the juniors, having conquered half the struggle, are infused with an air of superiority; and the seniors, ah yes, those super-seniors!!! Well, they just stay in their rooms and fill out college applications and think about next year, yes, next year . . .

It's all over now. Next year everyone will be one year closer to the end. Maybe a new batch of prefects to break in, more food to complain about (although there really is nothing to complain about), and more rules to be broken. What more can we say. It certainly can't get any worse.

A special congratulations to Art Bennett, Jon Scherbart, Bob Rasch, Craig Enright and Steve Eberhard, who made it through four years of Loyola Student Housing.

After hibernating for a year, the Radio Club surged back this term into a year of frantic activity. Maurice Bizzarri earned his amateur radio license in November, and Keith Fuller followed him into the amateur ranks in December.

Sixty-three cases of pop were consumed, and thirty fuses were blown. Moderator is Fr. Terrance Koch, and mascot is Davy.

The French Club came out of the jungle this year, and was do-o-o-oing many things. While a great many members were content to sit and eat bananas, other joined various schools in exciting and stimulating gatherings. Although honorary member Brigette Bardot could not attend any meetings, moderator Carlo Faillace kept the members entertained with stories about his stay in America. A fun time was had by tout le monde.

This year the Spanish Club is in full swing with trips to Mexico, community activities, and various school activities. The Club provides organized activities for the recreation of its members, as well as opportunities to become active in community projects in East Los Angeles, working with Mexican-Americans. Working at the orphanage in Tecate, Mexico, club members help with various tasks and play "big brother" to the children.

The President of the Spanish Club is Andrew Jimenez, who heads the general activities of the Club; the vice-president is Chuck Diaz. His field centers primarily on obtaining speakers for assemblies and club meetings. Heading the committee which concerns itself with trips to the orphanage and similar activities is Ron Romo. He is in charge of the Easter trip to Mazatlan, Mexico. Having the "public relations" task is Ben Ramos, who busies himself with community projects in East L. A. and the A. B. C. program (Aid to Baja California).

In his second year as club moderator, Mr. Edward Daneri acts as the guiding hand and encourages not only membership, but active participation. With "Big D's" efforts, the Spanish Club has become a club worth its weight in gold.

Another successful bowling season was enjoyed by the members of the Loyola Bowling League. Keen competition between the teams resulted in spirited see-saw battles for the lead which changed hands from week to week. Fourteen teams, comprised of three members each, competed for the winner's trophy with the same spirit typical of Loyola men. The teams sporting such colorful names as the LEE, YEE, TSE DYNASTY, CONTRADICTORY COMPLEX, HOLY ROLLERS, and THE ELIMINATORS demonstrated that sportsmanship is still the basis of friendly battle. Father Prussing once more exerted his steady leadership as well as contributing high bowling scores to his team.

The Chess Club has completed another successful year of service to Loyola. The club provides an outlet for creative expression through competition in yet another form. The competition is generally with other schools in the Los Angeles area, coupled with activities within the club itself.

The Invertebrate Paleontology Society provides its members with practical experience in the field sciences. Although involved basically in the study and collection of invertebrate fossils, the club does not hesitate to branch into related fields.

The most common activity is the group field trip, often accompanied by professional scientists as advisors. Members also visit and occasionally work in the labs of various museums of natural history. These members can question and learn from leading specialists in the various fields of study.

Expeditions have included a trip to the site in the Calico Mountains at which was found the oldest known human artifact in North America. Groups also make annual excursions to popular "dig" sites in such locales as Bakersfield, Camarillo, and San Diego.

The Student Ecology Committee is a newly formed activity this year. Known as the "Senior Crew" to its members, the committee's purpose is to make the students more aware of their responsibility in keeping the campus clean. Organized and headed by Steve Sharon and moderated by Fr. Wade, it is hoped that this organization will be carried into the future so that Loyola students may be proud of their campus.

The goals of the English Department of Loyola High School are geared toward helping a student confront his own personal challenges and those of the world in a productive learning situation.

Life is not a simple, compartmentalized system in which certain predictable moves lead a person toward certain predictable goals. Life is not safe, nor sure, nor necessarily fulfilling. Christian value is the finality of a humanistic English curriculum. The better we equip a student to make good value-judgments based on an understanding of man as he is, in terms of man as he was and as he ought to be, the better Christian a student will become. The Loyola student is being educated, or more appropriately is educating himself to discern real values. He grows toward adult, Christian individualism; he stands in stark contrast to the person who views life as a polarized good/bad, right/wrong conflict. Such a person cannot cope with areas of grey, the very ground upon which most of his decisions and judgments must be made.

The classroom is a place for education; not an opportunity for a teacher to spoon-feed his captive audience, but an opportunity for a student to begin to reflect on the role of values in his own life, and a chance to think relationally. If the student learns to think relationally; if the values he explores can be discerned as operative in the world around him, for the good or harm of other persons, then, and only then, is there the possibility that his academic achievement will have a lasting and personal impact upon him. The role of the teacher then is to assist the student in serious inquiry into the meaning of things. In the words of Socrates: "The unexamined life is not worth living."

Loyola exists for one reason only—the student. And this student lives in the most technically advanced nation on earth. The achievements and products of science are his environment.

But while science has given many answers about man's world, it offers only more questions to his soul. In recent years there has been more concern about science because of more concern about people.

Biology now promises genetic manipulation. But biology doesn't suggest in what direction we should manipulate. It doesn't answer what we want people to be.

Chemistry discloses ways of combining, separating and rearranging atoms until innumerable plastics and fabrics and fuels pour out of the refineries and mills. But chemistry is mute when asked about harm to generations to come. Chemistry cannot tell us how to share all those products with those in need. Chemistry cannot help those people whose land is depleted of ores. Chemistry cannot locate the mills and refineries to develop the underdeveloped.

Physics has given man the bomb, and it has taken him into the sky. But as a science, Physics cannot answer "why?" or "what is man?"

The sciences do not try to answer moral questions. But because of science, man has more moral questions. Because of science, man is more concerned about what he's doing, and about what he's doing to other people.

The Loyola graduate will move into a world that is much more concerned about the effects of science. And, having been introduced to the methods and the findings and the abilities of science, he will be more knowledgeable about, and aware of this challenge, and how it relates to the moral traditions of his faith.

Some students often misunderstand the purpose of the Social Studies Department at Loyola. To them, the curriculum appears little more than a series of separate courses on government, history, psychology, and sociology. Consequently, they overlook the underlying theme which unites these studies through a common goal: to make the student cognizant of the past; to give him an idea of the social, political, and economic functions of the society he lives in as well as his personal role within that system; together with the cultivation of the ideals of integrity, constructive patriotism and loyalty.

The aim of Loyola's Math Department is to help the student acquire a workable understanding of basic mathematical principles and fundamental operations and develop his ability to work effectively with a given set of facts, principles, and logic.

The goal of Loyola's Language Department is to develop a student's understanding of a language, along with the ability to speak and write it with reasonable facility.

The first and second year language programs stress the aspects of basic grammar, simple narratives and other fundamental concepts. The third year of studies focuses on enriching the minds of the students culturally. Much material on the country's political and cultural heritage is treated as well as interesting features of the country and its historical highlights.

Loyola's education is definitely value-centered. The entire educational process takes place in a Christian atmosphere which aims at developing Christian principled young men. The theology department aids in this process by seeking to help the student better understand his faith and personalize his commitment to Christ. As the child grows into an adolescent, so must his faith and commitment deepen and develop towards greater maturity.

'Tis the good reader that makes the good book; in every book he finds passages which seem confidences or asides hidden from all else and unmistakably meant for his ear; the profit of books is according to the sensibility of the reader; the profoundest thought or passion sleeps as in a mine, until it is discovered by an equal mind and heart.
